Introduction

Late in the year 1895 the following circular was sent to each graduate whose address could be obtained:

“To the Graduates of Iowa College:

The time has come for the issuing of another Quinquennial Catalogue. In view of the fact that it is the last one prior to the semi-centennial celebration which we now plan to observe at commencement of 1898, the Trustees and Faculty have decided to make this quinquennial considerably fuller than heretofore. I am bidden therefore by their vote to ask each one of the graduates to send me a letter answering at least the following inquiries:

- (1) Date and place of birth;
- (2) Where did you prepare for college;
- (3) Places of residence since graduation;
- (4) Business pursuits;
- (5) Literary work done;
- (6) Degrees received;
- (7) Official positions held;—

WITH THE DATES ATTACHED TO EACH ITEM.

We ask the married women among the graduates to give the names, official titles and any items of interest concerning the lives and work of their husbands. We make a similar general request concerning wives of alumni.

The answers to our inquiries will be, we trust, given with the utmost frankness and fullness with no consideration of either pride or modesty. We desire full and exact matter of history.

We do not want your letters confined with mechanical strictness to these inquiries but shall be glad of anything of interest you may choose to write.

The last quinquennial, published in connection with the catalogue of '90-'91, was in many respects unsatisfactory, as much so doubtless to the graduates themselves as to the college. It is planned this year to publish it in a separate volume of similar style with the catalogue. It will be very much fuller than the last one. Unfortunately the letters sent in response to inquiries made for the last quinquennial were not preserved. I will ask the graduates to write their replies on one side only of the paper and leave a margin of at least an inch on the left side of the sheets, in order that these replies may be put together and permanently preserved.

I am also requested to make particular inquiry of each graduate for information concerning the place of residence and employment of former members of the class who did not graduate. Information concerning these will be of permanent value to the college. The enclosed circular with which I am still making inquiries will indicate to you the reason why we desire this information concerning these non-graduate students.

There are now nearly six hundred in the list of graduates of Iowa College. The story of their lives as it can be told in a quite full alumnal catalogue will be of great interest and of equally great value. This book cannot be made anything like complete without the hearty and generous co-operation of the graduates themselves. I therefore beg you to write me very fully of yourself since graduation, giving account of anything in your life or experience or work which will enable the college to make a record as complete as possible of the factors of your life that are of helpful interest. Let no one say "I have done nothing worthy of record," but kindly give us the fullest information along the lines above suggested and believe that we are interested in it.

Asking you to give this matter immediate attention that the work of preparation of the catalogue may not be delayed, I am

Faithfully yours,

GEORGE A. GATES.

It is the desire of the Trustees and Faculty that each alumnus make special plans to be present at our jubilee in 1898. We give notice thus early that we shall expect you here, in order that you may begin to make plans to be present.

GRINNELL, IOWA, December, 1895."

Many responded promptly; many needed a second circular; many still a letter from Miss Trueblood, my secretary; several an added personal appeal from me; a few a personal interview after all the preceding attempts; a very few, the most faithfully diligent search has failed to discover. Only two or three have flatly refused to answer inquiries—two have made no response to several letters received by them. Doubtless the compilers of future quinquennials will be able to fill some of the inevitable blanks in this one.

This Quinquennial differs somewhat from the usual form of such publications, in that it is considerably fuller, probably more so than any future catalogue will be. The number of graduates will be too great to make it wise again; the accumulating years come between the earlier and later graduates so that the personal interest in each other can not in the future be what it has been in the past. Ties will bind the graduates to the college just as much, but to each other, as between earlier and later classes, considerably less.

But in view of the approaching semi-centennial in 1898, it has seemed appropriate to take note of the fact that up to this time a very close bond has held the interest of our graduates both to the college and in large measure to each other. The loyalty of our graduates to their college is noteworthy and beautiful. In my acquaintance with colleges and college men I have not known it excelled.

Most of the graduates have responded heartily to the circular quoted above. The replies have been, as asked, full and explicit. They have been freely edited in the interest of a fair uniformity. Most conscientious effort has been made to state all that may appropriately appear in such a volume as this. Many details have been written in reply to the urgent requests of the circular, which though not wholly appropriate in the printed volume, are nevertheless carefully preserved for future editors of quinquennials, and for other reference.

However gladly an editor of such a pamphlet would often express estimates, not only his own but far beyond, of the value of work done, there would be a manifest impropriety in any such expression. Distinctions not intended would inevitably be inferred. There remained no other course but to state mechanically the facts. Moreover some lives that seem to themselves obscure and unworthy of special note, have been filled with the most generous helpfulness and the most far reaching usefulness.

This is particularly true of the lives of many of the women. A large number have replied that their lives have been so uneventful as to be undeserving of mention in our catalogue; and one or two have plumply refused therefore to give anything. In some such instances a few facts have been gathered from other sources, and small inaccuracies in dates etc. may be ascribed to such refusal. (The decliners deserve more errors!)

Many women, most in fact, are naturally wives and mothers. A quinquennial makes only formal and brief note of such a fact; but who can measure the contribution to human society of the patient years in such homes as the consecrated, educated wife and mother can make? These women have created homes that are centers of power for good, not only to the children in them, but in the town or community or city where they are. The college women of America are centers of refining, elevating, inspiring influence. Such women and such homes mean wider outlook for all young people who come into contact with them. There is restraint of wrong impulses and incitement to right ones, and encouragement to push out for education and a broader life. Let there be one generation of educated motherhood; there need be no fear of illiteracy in the next generation.

It has been interesting to note that many women graduates have gone back from college into their own homes, to make the home of father and mother richer for their acquisitions. It would be a pity if college training should weaken in the young women of our homes their sense of obligation to or their affection for those to whom must always be their first duty.

A large number of our women have referred apologetically to the fact that home duties together with church obligations and social demands have left little time for special study or literary pursuits. But why apologetically? Were it not so, did the woman so misunderstand or misuse her education as to underestimate the superior value of just that womanly work of home, religion and society; work as unostentatious, and influence as unobtrusive, and power as silent, and life as vivifying as the sunlight, then indeed would a heavy complaint be laid at the door of higher education of women. So let the unprinted records stand,—“wife and mother,”—“Home-maker for my father and mother” (or both) etc., full of honor, marking the sacrifice of service, than which there is no higher or holier usefulness.

May one be permitted this added word, in this really family volume? I have been often deeply moved by the tales of the lives as they have been almost, often quite, confidentially revealed in these many letters. The life experiences have been to me as touching as a series of dramas; the successes and the failures; the hard work and the happy years; the disappointments and the great blessings; the rich joys and the bitter, bitter sorrows; few comedies, more tragedies, but all deep and serious earnestness of reality, as the swift passing years have wrought their sobering mission upon the buoyant lives of college boys and college girls. Verily "Life is real, Life is earnest;" as the youthful Longfellow wrote. But the white headed poet in his Cambridge home knew, by an infinite measure of difference, better than the youth what the youth's words mean.

Iowa College wants all her living children around her at her semi-centennial commencement, June, 1898. In the nature of the case this will be impossible but we shall surely see nearly all. Few indeed of the alumni of that date will be her guests at the next semi-centennial, and those few will come with white hair and feeble steps. But the oldest of our graduates is yet not very old. The college itself is in her mere youth. Our welcome home again to the whole family of children (and there are even now a few grandchildren) shall be wide and generous. Come.

GEORGE A. GATES.

Iowa College in the Civil War

The trustees, teachers and patrons of the college were aggressively opposed to slavery. Grinnell had always been ultra enough to admit colored children to its schools, and had aided John Brown and "bleeding Kansas" by personal and pecuniary expressions of sympathy. When the South began the Civil War to insure territory for the expansion of the "peculiar institution" it was natural that the war spirit should convulse the town and the college. It continued to do so till Lee surrendered. During no time for about half a century has it been so nearly impossible to put heart into college work. The news from the field was distracting enough, but the question of personal obligation as to enlistment was most distracting in the minds of teachers and pupils.

Early in 1861 a class of twelve was just ready to enter the college, the largest senior academy class in the history of the institution and the first in Grinnell. The personal and college ambitions of years were on the verge of fruition. "Those students must wait till commencement!" But it was very hard to keep them. Study, too, was very difficult. It was no solitary incident when a war conversation occupied the full recitation hour. Some could be relied on generally, for very systematic college work, but Russell Eugene Jones and Carlos James Kelsey, pre-eminently, were constantly on the verge of abandoning Homer's Iliad for Hardee's Tactics.

After Commencement, Company E of the 4th Iowa Cavalry was organized largely of those in the vicinity of Grinnell. The temptation to the field could be resisted no longer. Out of that first freshman class here R. E. Jones smuggled himself into the service by concealing a defective eye, rose to the captaincy and fell dead in near the last battle of the war as he was going over the breast works into a rebel fort, whose last defender was leaving it with a Parthian shot. C. J. Kelsey became a lieutenant, lost his health, yet clung to his company till after Appomattox, and then wrestled with disease and with business until 1878 when he died in Grinnell. The three college members of that company who were living in 1890, at the suggestion of their classmate, Hon. R. M.

Haines, were granted the honorary degree of "A. M." by the college trustees. For two of them it was the last possible opportunity, for Hiram H. Cardell and Joseph Lyman died before the next Commencement. Cardell was a lieutenant in his company and after the war devoted himself to the law in Perry, Iowa. Lyman was regimental clerk, then transferred to the 29th Iowa Infantry and made its adjutant, then its major. He, too, entered the law and was elected district judge and then sent to congress from the Council Bluffs district. The third of those survivors, John M. Carney, was the commissary sergeant of his regiment, the mayor of his town after 1865, and still resides in Gilman. Four others of that freshman class were connected with the army, graduated from the college and will be mentioned later in this catalogue, viz: Charles N. Cooper, Robert M. Haines, Stephen H. Herrick and Charles Scott. One other member finds no place among the graduates, for James E. Ellis enlisted in the 46th infantry in 1864, was made sergeant and died in Memphis from exhaustion by army service after a sudden transfer from Iowa to the mid-summer of Tennessee and Mississippi.

Of the ten other students in the 4th cavalry, Norman S. Bates now of Highmore, South Dakota, captured a secession flag from its rebel bearer, in battle; John W. Jones of Madison was made sergeant and lieutenant; Thomas H. Craver died in service; William Augustus Chapman, now a physician in Hastings, Nebraska, became a sergeant in the 46th infantry; States D. Palmer gained admission to the army by the appointment of a guardian that he might give his consent to it, and is now a business man in Chicago; William G. Work rose to a lieutenancy, was seriously injured by an explosion, and is now in business in Des Moines; Laurens Horton, L. O. Mathews, O. J. Mathews and Abraham Palmer served through the war.

Reuben N. Munger was a private in the 2nd cavalry, and Benjamin F. Holland in the 3rd was killed in battle at Moore's Mills, Missouri. Frederick B. Sanborn was a lieutenant in the 8th Iowa Cavalry.

In infantry service, M. K. Campbell was in the 5th Iowa regiment and is now a banker at Harlan; William A. Elliott was in the 8th and now resides at Dodge City, Kansas: A. W. Hobbs was in the 11th and was killed in battle; and James T. Loring entered the 14th and was killed at Nashville, Tennessee, December 16th, 1864, in his first engagement.

Seven students joined the 10th regiment, i. e.: Charles L. Bailey; Oliver P. Daly became a lieutenant; Levi C. Ela who was made adjutant; and Charles Russell Cardell, Joseph W. Holland, B. Mendenhall and Amandus D. Risdon served as privates.

The college gave to the 14th regiment Joseph A. Shanklin who was made a lieutenant; Oliver C. Kindley joined the 37th; Charles Leonard Bailey was lieutenant in the 47th; Edward Pruyn a sergeant in the 139th Illinois infantry; and Thomas Chase slipped into a Rhode Island battery with only one sound eye.

The 28th regiment was reinforced by John W. Carr, who received a captaincy, and is now the attorney of Poweshiek county; Benjamin F. Kierulff, who served it as regimental clerk and is now a Marshalltown physician; Albert E. Quaife who was a musician and now sends a son to college from Ionia; Joseph E. Shipley a business man in Chicago after the war; and by Benjamin F. Casady who was accepted after two rejections and on a misunderstanding as to his age. The last named was killed in the hottest of the fight at Champion Hill, Mississippi.

Only one student was sacrificed at Andersonville, James W. Dowd, who had joined the 112th Illinois infantry.

The largest number in any one company, twenty-six, were enrolled in Company B of the 46th Infantry for one hundred days in 1864, when Sherman began his march toward Atlanta and the sea. It was the hour of supreme effort on the part of the government and when the college retained no student within its walls who was liable to military service. The college contingent included the 1st lieutenant (a professor who had been detained in the class room until that time by the college trustees);* Charles Scott, the 2nd lieutenant, later a college alumnus and one in whose honor a scholarship fund is now contemplated; two regimental clerks, Stephen Henderson Herrick and James Irving Manatt, who graduated soon after; two musicians, Francis E. Ford who died immediately after his discharge of the disease then prostrating him, and Dana H. Robbins who lived but a few months longer; one orderly, Charles W. Hobart who died after a successful business career in Grinnell and Minneapolis; two sergeants, W. A. Chapman and James E. Ellis, both of whom have been named already. Besides these there were five corporals and twelve privates of whom Charles N. Cooper, William Justus

*The professor here hinted at is the writer of this article.

Eaton, Gershom H. Hill, and Jacob P. Lyman are named among the alumni. Of the others George M. Adams graduated elsewhere and is now pastor of the Baptist Church in Grinnell; Charles Lorenzo Bailey became a farmer and was drowned in Michigan; Burton A. Billings and George W. Lancaster have been lost to our sight; Henry J. Bodurtha is in Omaha; Charles E. Cox enlisted in the 47th Wisconsin Infantry and has died; Theodore F. Crane studied law, has been in business and resides in Grinnell; Evelin M. Fuller is a banker in Early; Seth W. Macy is a farmer near Colfax; Homer R. Page became a physician and died while professor in a Des Moines Medical College; and Loyal C. Phelps, Jr., and Frank L. Rouse are in business, the one in Chicago and the other in Colorado Springs.

Four others connected with the enterprises of the war are named among the alumni,—Seth W. Arnold was in the Christian Commission; Mary E. Snell, a teacher in the United States schools at Gallatin, Tennessee; and two whose respect for the principles of the Friends, or, at least, whose regard for their ancestors who were Friends, forbade them to bear arms, viz.: Robert M. Haines and Jesse Macy, whose service as teachers and otherwise was of great value, the one with the Christian Commission at St. Louis, the other in the Hospital at Savannah, Georgia.

Thoughts of just eulogy for these students have come to mind and slipped away through my pen again and again, but they must be erased, for a fair discrimination either by the writer or the reader, is utterly impossible. Honor to one may seem like deduction from another. Students before the cyclone will remember the memorial tablet on the wall of West College which bore the names of those who died in the army. Those who were here at that time will also remember how tenderly the mad tornado bore it down among the brick and the timber of that college ruin without a break or a scratch so that it reappears uninjured at the entrance of Alumni Hall. Those soldiers who did not graduate and their friends may rest assured that, although their names may not be printed in subsequent quinquennials, the college will be no less careful to preserve all memorials of their sacrifices for the country than was the cyclone of 1882.

Others might be named (although many cannot be), who turned aside from the very threshold of the college to join the army; perhaps none of these came nearer entering the institution than Charles F. Craver who had made all arrangements for doing so, including a contract for boarding with the time agreed upon for beginning. He joined Company E of the 4th Iowa Cavalry, served through the war, built up a large manufacturing business in Grinnell, became a member of the Iowa Legislature, and removed to Harvey, Illinois, where he now resides. Two of his sons have enjoyed the college advantages for which, for himself, he could only plan.

There were others who came from the army to the college, who did not go out from it. We claim these also as "our soldiers." The names of two of these appear in the record of the class of 1871, viz.: M. Austin and J. B. M. Bishop. Young Austin had passed the darkest and the brightest experiences of a penniless orphan boy when he enlisted in the 21st Massachusetts Infantry. He was promoted, wounded in battle, and suffered in prison and while escaping from it. The business boy foretold the business man by the possession of a few hundred dollars when he began his college course and when he ended it. The prophecy has been fulfilled in Grinnell and in Chicago. Mr. Bishop dropped into college from a farm. His connection with the army was not disclosed until his teacher in United States History asked him to give an account of Sheridan's movements in the Shenandoah Valley. The reply was unhesitating, minute, thrilling. His surprised instructor inquired, "Where did you find that, Mr. Bishop?" The low modest answer came back, "I was there." The young student had been a part of that history and had been seriously wounded in battle.

It would be appropriate to record here the names of all soldiers who were in the college while it was at Davenport, but no one who is now connected with it is able to do so. It will be deemed a special favor if any one will furnish a report of such service for preservation in the college archives.
